An Imbibe retrospective

By Mark DeWolf

The Restaurant Association of Nova Scotia annually brings together the province's best bartenders to showcase their cocktail-making talents at the Imbibe: A Cocktail Event. Each year, attendees and judges vote on their favourite cocktails. Enjoy our retrospective of past winning drinks.

2019 Lolita

By Annie Murray
(Antojo Tacos + Tequila)

2 Servings

1 1/2 oz Casamigos Reposado

1/4 oz Amaretto

1/2 oz maple orgeat*

1/4 oz agave syrup

1/2 oz fresh lime juice

4 drops rose water

2 dashes Angostura bitters

Directions:

1. Place all ingredients in an ice-filled shaker.
2. Shake well.
3. Double strain into coupe glasses.
4. Garnish with small flower.

* In a saucepan, combine 1 1/2 cups toasted almond milk (1 part blanched almonds, toasted; 2 parts warm water). Heat until golden brown. Purée and then strain through a cheesecloth) and add 1 1/4 cups maple syrup. Cook over medium-low heat, stirring occasionally (about 5 minutes). Remove from heat and stir in 2 1/2 teaspoons Cognac, 2 1/2 teaspoons Amaretto and 1/2 teaspoon rosewater.

2016 The Betty

By Adam Foley

(Level Bar, The Prince
George Hotel)

1 Serving

- 3/4 oz Citadelle Gin
- 3/4 oz St. Germain
Elderflower Liqueur
- 1 oz egg white
- 1 tsp dehydrated honey dust*
- 1 oz Bergamot Sherry Syrup
- 1/2 oz fresh lemon juice
- 1/2 oz fresh orange Juice
- 1 oz tonic water
- Sprinkle hand crushed lavender (optional)
- House made cracker (optional)

Directions:

1. Place all ingredients in a Boston shaker and dry shake for a count of 10.
2. Add ice and continue to shake for count of 10.
3. Double strain into coupe glass.
4. Garnish with a sprinkle of hand crushed lavender pedal and house made cracker.

* Honey dust is simply dehydrated honey. Omit if you can't find.

 Bergamot is difficult to find. For a substitute, double the amount of lemon and orange juice used and add 1/4 fluid ounce of Dry Sack Sherry.

Hide + Seek

LOUNGE / BEVERAGE ROOM / NIGHTCLUB

Hide from reality and seek to add some fun back into your social life with our new urban loft Hide+Seek. One of the most interesting aspects of Hide+Seek is its versatility, offering something for all. The cocktail vibes flow from 9pm, as customers sit sipping from our menu, enjoying the music from our resident DJs. Later our DJ team takes over and builds the tempo with some old school RnB, Funk & Soul and Hip Hop classics until 3:30am. Then back to reality but don't worry, we'll be waiting for you to find us again. Friday and Saturday: 9pm-3:30am.

How to eat a lobster like a local

By Mark DeWolf

You've arrived in Nova Scotia, the land of fabulous seafood. For many visitors a meal of freshly steamed Nova Scotia lobster is a must do. We agree. Here are our tips for eating lobster like a local.

1. Grab the lobster by the body. Twist off the tail, claws and legs.
2. Hold the tail and snap off the flippers.
3. Insert a fork where the flippers broke off. Push the meat out in one piece. Remove the vein.
4. Twist off the claws.
5. Using a lobster cracker, split the claw at about its mid-point. You can also use a mallet and hit the claw until it cracks.
6. Remove the claw meat.
7. Remove the legs. There's no elegant way to get the meat out of these. The best course of action is to suck the meat out treating the legs as a straw.
8. Unhinge the back from the body. Expect to find some green tomalley (the lobster's liver) here. Some people consider this the tastiest part, while others choose not to eat it. It's up to you.
9. Now dunk your lobster in some melted butter.
10. Enjoy it like a local with a pint of craft beer or a glass of Nova Scotia white wine.

Saving the world, one bite at a time

Meet four local chefs who are incorporating sustainable options on their menus

By Suzanne Bartlett

Ardon Mofford Governor's Pub, Sydney

"Here at the Governor's Pub, we specialize in seafood, so we source everything we use from local fisherman. More than 80 per cent of our menu features local ingredients — seafood, produce, whatever's in season, we use. We're so fortunate to be able to use sustainably sourced lobster and crab which is delivered fresh, right to our door (and that means less of a carbon footprint by trucking in food from other places). We use cold water shrimp from Louisbourg Seafoods, local maple syrup and honey as natural sweeteners in our recipes and the local produce and meats we use vary by season. If one of our suppliers has a local lamb or line-caught halibut, that's what you'll see on special in the restaurant. We have really great relationships with our suppliers, which allows us to pass on those fresh, in-season ingredients to our customers."

Chef Mark Gabrieau Gabrieau's Bistro, Antigonish

"We have our own farm here and a really substantial compost program. We're making all of our own organic compost, which then goes back into the garden. We're producing at least 50 per cent of our own produce all summer long and into the fall and supplement our needs by buying from local farmers. We've received several environmental awards, including the Mobius Award of Environmental Excellence. We've put a lot of things in place to make a difference before they were required by the industry, so it's nice to be recognized for that. I often look at how we can do things better — having less of an impact on the Earth and the environment, so that things can remain accessible and sustainable for years to come, particularly our oceans. I make really conscious choices when buying products — first, I want the best quality, but I also need to consider: where is it coming from? What impact are the products having on the environment and how will that affect our communities?"

Frederic Tandy Ratinaud French Cuisine, Halifax

"For me, the buy local movement is a great thing to embrace. Local support equals sustainability within the industry and that benefits the small farmers and meat producers. To me, it just makes sense; it's always been a way of life for me. When I was studying to be a chef in France, we were using vegetables and meats in season from local farmers and all of the restaurants were also doing that because that's a fundamental part of the process. You simply cannot have a great dish if you don't start with the best quality ingredients. That's key. We have access to so many great local products here in Nova Scotia and there are countless local meats and veg available to us. We make everything in house: cured meats, sausage, condiments, preserves — it's all made by hand with carefully chosen ingredients and we can offer those truly local products to our consumers."

Jason Lynch Le Caveau Restaurant, Grand Pré

"We try to source everything we possibly can locally — more specifically through companies that are Nova Scotian owned and operated. Our main goal is economically supporting Nova Scotia businesses wherever possible. From meats to cheeses to produce, even our dry goods, we buy it all from Nova Scotia, keeping the money we spend here in the province. We use Sustainable Blue for our salmon, we carry all locally made cheeses, our produce is grown by Ted Hutten, Noggins and Taproot Farms, we get our meats from Oulton's and we go to smaller growers for specific items we need. In every instance we aim to find someone to work with directly.

Sure, buying local reduces our carbon footprint and that's important to us, but it's bigger than that — it's ensuring the sustainability of the industry. By supporting the origin of the foods we're eating, that's the best way to ensure those sustainable practices are in place. We deal directly with the farmers and that demonstrates that we truly value their top-quality products. Food is greatly undervalued by many people nowadays — and we have to get back to what's important. In order to check all of those boxes — to ensure that the foods we're eating and serving are sustainable, safe, healthy and local, we need to understand that it's going to cost a little more to get that level of quality."

Lightfoot & Wolfville Vineyards

RESTAURANT / WINERY

The estate nurtures not only 40 acres of vineyard, but also raises heritage breed livestock and grows its own produce for the winery kitchen. The new hospitality facility, opened in 2017, features a wine shop, tasting room, wood-fired pizza oven and patio where guests can enjoy stunning views of Cape Blomidon and the Minas Basin. The underground barrel cellar and vineyard marquee provide a stunning venue for weddings, social gatherings and corporate events. Lightfoot & Wolfville focuses on crafting artisanal wines that speak of their origin, including award winning Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, aromatic whites such as Riesling and sparkling wines.

Cheers to local

Let us help you make sure you are sipping on an authentically local product

Local produce, meats, cheeses, beer and, in more recent years, craft spirits, are all at our fingertips in Nova Scotia. From Sydney to Yarmouth and everywhere in between, there are craft breweries, wineries and distilleries at every turn. Buying local is more popular than ever and supporting local businesses is a no-brainer, right? Well, it should be, but when it comes to purchasing craft spirits, there are a few tips to follow in order to ensure that the product you're buying is authentically crafted here in Nova Scotia. There are a variety of distilleries in Nova Scotia, which range from true grain to glass distilleries to others that don't operate a still — rather blending and bottling in the province with neutral grain spirits or alcohol that has already been aged (you can buy spirits that are already made and just brand them for immediate sale). Some might argue that this is a marketing stunt and not a true embodiment of the purpose of buying and supporting local.

Tips on how to ensure you are buying an authentically locally produced craft spirit:

1. Consider the price

Producing a craft distilled spirit from start to finish is an expensive undertaking. Therefore, the amount of care, time, ingredients and quality that make up the finished bottle is reflected in the prices we pay as consumers. If something seems too good to be true, it probably is. It is nearly impossible to craft an authentic spirit from start to finish for the same price as bigger brands. But don't worry about paying a little bit more for a local product. Those extra dollars go towards supporting locally sourced ingredients, thus supporting local farmers and foragers in the process.

2. Go to the source and visit the distillery

If you can see their still in action and talk to somebody about the process, you can be sure it's authentically produced. Take a tour, ask questions, learn about their processes and taste the spirits before you purchase. Sounds like fun research to us!

3. Read the label

Craft spirits which are authentically distilled start to finish here in Nova Scotia will proudly indicate this on the label. If a bottle doesn't indicate that it was fermented and distilled in Nova Scotia then chances are, it probably wasn't.

4. Be informed and ask questions

If you understand the process, ingredients and steps it takes to make a spirit locally and from scratch, you'll understand how to make more informed decisions when making purchases.

5. Use your judgement

Like with anything in life, take the sales pitches with a grain of salt or on the rocks if you prefer.
